STORE OWNER FIGHTS BACK

Shopkeeper beats robber with baseball bat after being shot

Chicago Tribune

The two robbers may have figured Quizhpe's Gifts and Sports in Logan Square was an easy mark.

But waiting for them inside was an owner who had been robbed before and had had enough.

In a brief but violent confrontation, Luis Quizhpe and his brother-in-law Luis Ernesto Aucaquizhpe held their ground in the face of a barrage of gunfire and chased the robbers out of their store.

Quizhpe, 62, was shot in the leg but didn't know it as he grabbed a baseball bat and began swinging viciously at the robber who had grabbed Aucaquizhpe and pulled out a gun.

"I thought [the gun] was a toy, but what made me frightened and really made me angry was when they grabbed my brother-in-law by the neck and they were pointing the gun at him," Quizhpe said Wednesday from a North Side hospital, where he was being treated for the leg wound.

One of the robbers fired at least 10 shots during the robbery at the gift shop, 2242 N. Western Ave. In the chaos, the gunman shot his fellow robber.

"It was like the Fourth of July. Pow, pow, pow," Quizhpe said. "Then [one of the robbers] was yelling, 'Kill the [bleep].'"

Swinging the bat, Quizhpe beat the gunman repeatedly in the upper body and on the head as he tried to get behind the store's counter. Aucaquizhpe hurled a stool at the gunman's head and then chased the attackers out of the store with a fire extinguisher.

Quizhpe said he didn't realize he had been shot until he was calling police after the robbers had fled.

"I felt something warm down my leg," he said. "I lost about a gallon of blood."

Police said the suspects fled north on Western and then west on Belden Avenue, where they drove off in a gray car. One suspect was being questioned Wednesday at Stroger Hospital, police said.

Quizhpe's wife, Aida, said she thinks the robbers got the worst of it.

"I think both of them have to be in the hospital because they were more badly injured," she said. "It was a fight like you can't imagine."

Quizhpe said the robbery has led him to consider retiring and selling the store. He said his son and his young grandchildren had been in the store only minutes earlier.

"With what happened, I've been thinking about selling everything off and changing my business," he said. "The reality is, with everything going on, it's difficult to put myself and my family in danger."

Captured on video

The Tuesday afternoon attack, which lasted less than two minutes, was caught on surveillance video and circulated around the Internet on Wednesday.

In the video, one of the robbers grabs Aucaquizhpe, then points a gun at Quizhpe while the other robber walks around to the cash register.

Quizhpe holds out his hands and opens the register. The robber grabs a handful of cash, then struggles with Quizhpe and yells at the gunman to shoot. The gunman opens fire, apparently wounding his partner, who limps back around the counter and toward the front door.

A mad scramble follows. The gunman keeps firing as he tries to jump over the counter and reach a button to unlock the door. Quizhpe keeps hitting him with the bat. Aucaquizhpe joins in, first jabbing the fleeing robbers with a long metal pole, then hurling a stool at the gunman and finally chasing the robbers out of the store with a fire extinguisher.

Let the nerds have their word

Ryan Smith

» @ryansmithwriter

You know who is a total geek? That James Bond guy.

BuzzFeed recently published a list of "nerdy" celebrities, and the website named Daniel Craig because the swashbuckling British actor, who stars as superspy 007 in the movies, enjoys the video game "Halo." Also included on the list: Vin Diesel (for his love of Dungeons and Dragons), Mila Kunis (also a gamer) and Zoey Deschanel (her glasses, I guess?).

It's official. "Nerd" and "geek"—words once used to negatively describe a certain kind of intelligent person—have been overused and misused to the point of meaninglessness. As someone who once wore those labels as a hard-earned badge of honor (I have the scars from repeated wedgies to prove it), I think it's time we reclaim them.

It's difficult to imagine now, but the "N" and "G" words used to be uttered by the popular crowd as an epithet to demean socially awkward, brainy types who couldn't get a date. That's why the bespectacled college guys in the 1984 movie "Revenge of the Nerds" needed revenge—because they were an oppressed minority of sorts.

Three decades later, the nerds have inherited the Earth. Bill Gates and Mark Zuckerberg are insanely rich. Most of the entertainment appearing on our screens was ripped from the pages of comic books. The biggest star emerging from last year's presidential election arguably was brilliant statistician Nate Silver.

As a result, everyone identifies as a nerd or geek.

After hunky NFL punter Chris Kluwe was named sexiest man of the year by Salon Magazine, he said, "It's a little weird because I'm a nerd video-game player." And even though George Clooney and a handful of A-list celebs attended last year's White House Correspondents' Dinner, insiders still insist on calling it "nerd prom." At this point, the only famous people who aren't nerds are Madonna, Mike Ditka and the guy from the Dos Equis commercials.

It's not just celebrities allying themselves with nerd culture. I've met a seemingly infinite number of regular people who claim nerdhood just because they wear dark-framed glasses or regularly watch "Game of Thrones" or "The Walking Dead." That's not nerdy; it's watching quality TV programming—with corrective lenses.

If you're single, it's hard not to stumble upon an online dating profile that doesn't use the words "nerdy" or "geeky" because it's become the self-deprecating way of saying "I am smart" or "I have a hobby." It's amazing that you now can identify as a nerd about things that aren't in the least way socially unacceptable: beer, fashion and art. I can't wait for the day Kate Upton tells Sports Illustrated, "I'm a swimsuit modeling nerd!"

So where does that leave those of us who dress up as Wolverine at comic book conventions, belong to a "World of Warcraft" guild, play in multiple fantasy baseball leagues or earned Ph.D.s in robotics? There's got to be a word to describe those of us who would never be invited to party with Daniel Craig or Vin Diesel.

Or maybe I'm just overthinking this. God, I'm such a nerd.

BUZZ KILL

MAYBE IT'S TIME TO GET MORE SLEEP—LAWMAKERS CONSIDERING BAN ON ENERGY DRINKS

By Kate Bernot | REDEYE

Come Fridays, Nelson Ignila, a 22-year-old Lincoln Park resident, is exhausted from the long hours he puts in at his management consulting job. Since he doesn't have time for an evening nap before going out, Ignila reaches for one of the 5-Hour Energy shots that he and his roommates bought in bulk at Costco.

If a proposed Chicago city ordinance passes, though, Ignila might have to find a different way to get his caffeine fix.

The city's Committee on Health and Environmental Protection is working on a bill that could ban the sale of certain energy drinks based on their caffeine content, or could prevent them from being sold to people under 21. Energy drinks would be defined as a canned or bottled beverage containing 180 milligrams or more of caffeine per container. For example, an 8.4-ounce can of Red Bull would still be legal to sell, while a 1.9-ounce 5-Hour Energy shot would not (see chart). A similar law banning the sale of energy drinks to minors has been proposed at the state level.

Testifying during a Health and Environmental Protection Committee hearing in early March, a representative for energy drink manufacturers argued that their products shouldn't be regulated any differently from soda or coffee, which also may contain high levels of caffeine.

Though the Chicago bill isn't yet ready for a full City Council vote, it is raising eyebrows, especially among people who regularly rely on energy drinks for an extra boost.

"[Energy drinks] seem not any more harmful than alcohol or cigarettes or things that you can buy legally," Ignila said. "It seems pretty stupid and meaningless to ban adults from drinking the caffeinated beverages they want."

But some lawmakers say there is growing medical evidence that energy drinks contain harmful levels of caffeine that pose a risk to consumers, especially young people. Adolescents and young adults between the ages of 13 and 35 make up 65 percent of energy drink consumers, and are the largest buyers in an industry that is projected to reach $19.7 billion in sales this year, according to data in a journal of the Institute of Food Technologists and an FDA report.

"There are potentially toxic effects of caffeine on minors," said Howard Axe, a practicing internist and the president of the Chicago Medical Society who has testified in support of the proposed city legislation. "And for the young adult population that has [energy drinks] in combination with alcohol, it delays the sense of drunkenness. Those people go out and potentially try to drive home or do stupid things like stand close to 'E' tracks."

Axe cites a doubling in national energy-drink-related emergency room visits between 2007 and 2011, from about 10,000 to nearly 21,000.

He also points to the case of a 14-year-old Maryland girl who died in 2011 after consuming two 24-ounce Monster energy drinks, not realizing that she had an undiagnosed pre-existing condition that could have weakened a vein to her heart. Her mother subsequently filed a lawsuit against the company that makes the drinks, and was scheduled to testify before the Chicago committee meeting in March before a snowstorm canceled her flight. The case still is pending in California

BUZZ BREAKDOWN

Are energy drinks really more caffeinated than sodas or coffees? RedEye unscientifically selected nine caffeinated beverages available in Chicago to see how the pick-me-ups stack up.

Superior Court.

In Chicago, some lawmakers say energy drinks are much more concentrated than soda, and are specifically marketed to young people who don't understand their risks. Even at non-lethal doses, high levels of caffeine still can cause adverse reactions, including jitteriness, anxiety, high blood pressure and heart rate, dehydration, nervousness, dizziness, irregular heart beat and caffeine dependence, Axe said.

Concern over caffeine crashes and harmful health effects discourages West Loop resident Destiny Thompson, 32, from drinking energy drinks. She prefers a cup of black coffee in the morning, and maybe some tea in the afternoon if she feels tired.

"I think that [energy drinks] are super-high in sugar, and even the calorie-free ones have tons of artificial sweeteners," Thompson said. "For my own waistline and to be more natural, I stay away from energy drinks. I think something that increases your heart [rate] from a drink is not a good thing. Yes, coffee does the same thing, but not at the same level."

Ald. George Cardenas (12th), chairman of the city's health and environmental committee and one of the sponsors of the bill to ban the sale of energy drinks to minors, said his experience drinking a 20-ounce energy drink before going to the gym one afternoon—then being unable to fall asleep until 1 a.m.—proved to him how potent they can be.

"If you're going to be up all night, by all means, chug one," Cardenas said. "But it's not something that you consume every day." KBERNOT@TRIBUNE.COM | @KBERNOT

Students bring Michelle Obama to tears with stories of violence

Chicago Tribune

As politicians in Washington took a step toward tightening the nation's gun laws Wednesday, first lady Michelle Obama sat down with students at Harper High School in West Englewood and cried as they talked about the threat of violence they face every day growing up in Chicago.

Before the meeting began, Obama said she wanted to hear from each of the 22 students representing youth programs at the inner-city school and that she had as much time as they needed to take. She had come home to Chicago, she said, to do a lot of listening.

So for two hours, the first lady sat in the second-floor Library Media Center, away from the news media, as students told story after story about the challenges of dodging bullets, avoiding gangs and—the thing they cannot take for granted—staying alive.

According to the students, the first lady wanted to know how many of them had been affected by the gun violence. Every one of them told her they had, said Ta'aleisha Jones, a 16-year-old who attended the meeting.

"She said, 'Have you ever experienced a family member hurt or killed?' I told her, 'Yeah.' When she was talking about how her life was and how we changed her, she got real emotional. I was like 'Wow, we see the first lady crying.' Tears were coming out her eyes," Jones said.

A second student confirmed that the first lady cried during the meeting.

Before entering the private meeting, the first lady talked to the students about growing up in a small apartment in South Shore, just a few miles from Englewood, and attending public schools.

In her third visit to the city this year, Obama sent a clear message that she does not plan to sit on the sidelines and watch Chicago's children succumb to street violence. Speaking earlier in the day to a group of business, civic and religious leaders at a downtown hotel, she said the issue is personal.

"I'm here today because Chicago is my home," said Obama, her voice cracking with emotion. "When it comes to ensuring the health and development and success of young people in this city, for me, this is my passion, it is my mission. And for me, this is personal because my story would not be possible without this city."

CITY COUNCIL

A number of matters were raised Wednesday at the City Council meeting, including proposals on carriage ride rules, public urination fines and city sticker sales.

- » The council approved a resolution to honor Harold Washington, Chicago's first African-American mayor, and declare April 15 as Harold Washington Day.
- » The council approved a measure to change the process of selling city vehicle stickers, switching to a year-round system (starting in 2014) from the current one in which stickers all are sold in June.
- » Ald. Brendan Reilly (42nd) and Michele Smith (43rd) proposed a measure to use decals to notify people of an existing rule that prohibits horse-drawn carriages from operating during extreme hot and cold weather.
- » At the urging of Mayor Emanuel and Police Superintendent Garry McCarthy, aldermen approved tougher penalties for people who ignore citations for public drinking, urinating or gambling. The new consequences range from $200 fines to up to six months in jail. REDEYE, TRIBUNE

EXPRESS LINES

- » Wrigleyville's alderman said Wednesday that the number of night games has re-emerged as a sticking point to getting a deal done on the Cubs' proposal to spend $300 million to upgrade Wrigley Field.
- » A man accused of drunken driving in a Lake Shore Drive crash last month that left a woman dead remained free Wednesday despite new charges against him. TRIBUNE

HOMICIDE TRACKER

By Tracy Swartz

TSWARTZ@TRIBUNE.COM | @TRACYSWARTZ

CHICAGO VIOLENCE ONE CITY UNDER THE GUN

In the last week there were two days during which more than one homicide was recorded. The city hasn't seen a calendar date with more than one homicide since mid-March, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found.

On Sunday, a 14-year-old boy was shot to death in the 2300 block of South Leavitt Street on the Lower West Side, police said. That same day, a 26-year-old man was stabbed to death in the 4000 block of South Wabash Avenue in Grand Boulevard, according to officials.

On April 4, shootings claimed a 22-year-old man in the 8000 block of South Manistee Avenue in South Chicago and a 33-year-old man in the 1400 block of West 80th Street in Auburn Gresham, officials said.

The last time Chicago saw more than one homicide in a day was March 16, when two men were killed in separate shootings, according to RedEye data. Ten January days saw more than one homicide, RedEye data shows.

Citywide, gunshot homicides were logged in the last week in Englewood and South Shore, RedEye found.

Seven homicides have been logged so far this month.

Forty-one homicides were recorded in April 2012, RedEye determined.

Former Bear is a 'marijuana freak'

Former Bears receiver Sam Hurd will change his plea formally to guilty Thursday in Dallas in his federal drug case, his lawyer said Wednesday.

The former NIU player, currently in prison, is charged with drug conspiracy, accused of conspiring to possess with the intent to distribute cocaine and marijuana beginning in July 2011 and continuing through June 6 of last year.

Hurd prefers to "vigorously contest" the sentencing in the coming months, arguing that he was not involved in alleged drug trafficking as much the government described, said Jay Ethington, Hurd's attorney. The trial was set for Monday.

Ethington said Hurd may be a marijuana user but is not a cocaine distributor.

"He's a marijuana freak," Ethington said. "He loves marijuana. He's addicted to high-grade marijuana."

Gun control on deck for Senate debate

WASHINGTON Two key U.S. senators announced a breakthrough deal Wednesday to expand background checks for gun buyers, boosting prospects that the Senate will approve at least some of President Obama's proposed gun restrictions.

The agreement by Joe Manchin (D-W. Va.) and Pat Toomey (R-Pa.) sets the stage for a Senate debate on a gun-control package starting Thursday, when the Democrat-led chamber is expected to defeat conservative Republican efforts to block the bill from ever reaching a vote.

The proposal for expanded background checks appears to be Obama's best hope for meaningful gun control legislation in the aftermath of the December massacre of 20 children and six adults at an elementary school in Newtown, Conn.

Manchin and Toomey, both ardent defenders of gun rights, said their measure would expand criminal background checks for prospective gun buyers to include sales made at gun shows and online, closing a major loophole in a system that analysts say allows as many as 40 percent of gun buyers to avoid checks.

But the agreement, designed to keep guns out of the hands of dangerous criminals and the mentally ill, left significant exemptions for "temporary transfers" of weapons or private sales among friends and family members. No background checks would be required in such transactions.

More controversial parts of Obama's plan—such as a ban on rapid-fire assault weapons like the one used in Connecticut and limits on the capacity of ammunition magazines—appear to have a slim chance of clearing the Senate.

The bipartisan deal on background checks does not guarantee it will clear the Senate, where Obama's Democrats control 55 of the 100 seats.

Obama proposes $3.77 trillion budget

President Obama proposed a $3.77 trillion budget Wednesday that combines controversial cuts to social safety net programs with tax increases on the wealthy.

Mail service won't be cut

The Postal Service has abandoned its cost-cutting plan to end Saturday delivery of first-class mail, the agency's board of governors said Wednesday, citing congressional opposition.

Cops: Texas stabbing rampage was planned

The man who went on a stabbing rampage at a Texas college had planned his attack "for some time," and had fantasized about stabbing people since the age of 8, Sheriff Adrian Garcia said Wednesday.

Gunman dead after holding hostages

A gunman who took several Atlanta firefighters hostage Wednesday was shot dead after officers raided the home where he was holed up with his captives, police said.

THE MAN WITH » CHICAGOAN SETS RECORD FOR WORLD'S FASTEST MARTIAL ARTS PUNCH 44 MPH FISTS

By Matt Lindner FOR REDEYE

Mess with an ordinary mathematician and you likely will be on the receiving end of a dirty look. Mess with mathematician-slash-author-slash-boxer Keith Liddell, however, and you might be on the wrong end of a world record-setting punch.

"Chicago has the record for the fastest hands," he said. "That's what I want people to see."

The 26-year-old Logan Square resident has etched his name in the Guinness Book of World Records as the owner of the world's fastest martial arts punch. On Oct. 6, Liddell threw a punch traveling 44 mph at Body Tac Karate Dojo in South Shore.

Last month, Guinness alerted Liddell that he indeed had broken the record. The previous mark was 43.3 mph, achieved by John Ozuna in 2008 in San Jose, Calif. Manu Gautam, records manager at Guinness, confirmed that Liddell is now the puncher to beat.

"[My coach] said if I hit somebody in the windpipe with that move, it could possibly kill them," he said. "We didn't know it was that powerful. We thought it was just speed."

Liddell set his sights on breaking world records after a double hernia derailed his Olympic boxing dreams in 2009.

"My coach [Larry Tankson] was being facetious," Liddell said. "He said 'you got a little bit of speed on you. Why don't you try and break a world record?' That's how it all got started."

Measuring the speed of a punch is a lot different from measuring the speed of a car, however. Liddell said it's more complicated than merely having someone train a radar gun on his fists.

"They analyzed a lot of my work that I had done," he said. "There's a lot of precision. It has to be on contact. It has to be a 44 mph on contact. It can't just be thrown at a speed instrument."

He said Tankson noticed something unusual when the two were working on his side jab.

"We had a shield, a punching bag shield and I demonstrated the side jab," he said. "When I did that, [Tankson] said to stop because it felt like his arm was going to break."

Liddell, who says he's hoping to qualify for the 2016 Olympics, said throwing punches that are both swift and destructive involves just as much brain as brawn.

RECORD COMPANY

With his 44 mph punch, Chicagoan Keith Liddell joins these Guinness Book of World Records all-stars.

FASTEST TIME TYPING THE ALPHABET ON AN IPAD

3.14 seconds » Chase Samuel in Osler, Saskatchewan, in February.

FASTEST 100 METERS ON A SKATEBOARD BY A DOG

19.678 seconds » Tillman the English bulldog during X Games XV in L.A. in July 2009.

FASTEST TOILET

42.25 mph » Set by a motorcycle and sidecar hidden under a bathroom set consisting of bathtub, sink and laundry bin, in Milan, Italy, in March 2011.

"It's moving your whole body into one motion fluidly," he said. "You have to generate something called torque, basically based upon full rotation on an axis point. With that movement, that's how you generate velocity."

Building that velocity in the gym isn't a matter of being able to lift a ton of weight, either. Liddell said the average person can develop fast fists by doing basic exercises.

"What you want is lean body tone; that will allow you to go quick," he said. "Pushups, sit-ups, even possibly chin-ups. One-, two-hand pushups, pushups on the knuckles."

As for getting hit by a 44 mph punch, Liddell said he isn't exactly sure how it would feel, and would rather avoid the experience if at all possible. "I hope it never happens, buddy, but I've been hit a lot," he said.

1	How can you tell the Masters is being played this week?	Two words: Jim Nantz. Side note: You know what's really a tradition unlike any other? Tiger wrestling.	I can see the burning bras sending SOS signals from Augusta already.	Because Tiger Woods is the No. 1 "player" in the world. You can take that however you like.	My "I Don't Care" senses are tingling.	Because everyone is yawning all the time everywhere.
2	What did Patrick Sharp mean when he said "enough's enough"?	He was doing all-you-can-eat wings or listening to 5 seconds of the Lumineers.	Didn't we all say that when we heard the Rolling Stones are going back on tour after 50 years?	He's been hearing about how popular the local hockey team is so he wants in on it.	The Blackhawks were undefeated when he got injured, so he wants to go back on another winning streak.	He was tired of how many bakeries only make cupcakes now.
3	How can Adam Dunn earn more playing time in National League parks?	Ask nicely and sincerely ... by tattooing "please" on his face.	Learn a few tunes on the organ.	Come up with some sort of elaborate kidnapping scheme involving Paul Konerko.	Oh, oh, my "I Don't Care" senses are really tingling now!	Hook his bat to a generator and the wind-power created by his strikeouts my God this joke is terrible.
4	If not with boos, how should Carlos Marmol be greeted by Cubs fans?	People are still saying, "Talk to the hand," right?	Moos because it's a double insult ... he'll think he's fat.	With an empty ballpark. The fans should just get up and leave whenever he pitches.	Form a human chain around Wrigley so he can't get in.	You're implying that the crowd at Wrigley is actually paying attention to the game.
5	What should Carmelo Anthony get for being named Forbes' most overpaid player?	Well, that can't be true, but he can still get some checks to sign for charity.	More money for getting the Knicks free publicity.	A lifetime achievement award. Being overpaid has an undefeated record against being underpaid.	He should get a free subscription to Forbes, the magazine for overpaid people in all industries.	Twelve more wins in a row. (Drops mic.)

SMELLS LIKE A 'WINNER'

On Tuesday, former MLB player Jose Canseco announced he was coming out with a "manfume." We can only assume this is meant to be a good thing. And we could try and describe it here, but really, his series of tweets say it better than we ever could (all sic).

- I have developed a manfume
- It is called CANSECO with 4 secret ingredients
- The first secret ingredient is dragons blood, not kidding
- The other three are odors of our youth and should transfer my powers
- Limited bottling available in fine stores and others on May 1. secret tip - get my agent if you want to reserve a case joemelendez@msn.com
- I was also thinking of calling it HUG 4U and my boston friend Deep Throat @deeeptthroat says it should be MANSECO. what do you guys think?

A goat's head was delivered to Wrigley Field on Wednesday, addressed to Cubs owner Tom Ricketts, a team spokesman said. The package was dropped off at Gate K at the field, and later was reported to police. Either someone's practical joke went too far, or it's a gruesome "negotiating tactic."

Noah's big break

Joakim Noah is getting into the movie business. According to thr.com, the Bulls star is producing a documentary about high school hoops phenom Lenny Cooke, a onetime teammate of Noah's who was billed as the next Magic Johnson before flaming out. The film, titled "Lenny Cooke," will premiere at the Tribeca film festival.

THIS WEEK'S TOP RELEASES

Boss: Season 2

The second season of this political and human drama featuring Kelsey Grammer as Chicago Mayor Tom Kane steps up the intensity of the first season. Grammer's first year was good enough to earn him a Golden Globe. The second season comes with an even stronger performance from Grammer, who portrays a politician battling to hold his career together despite having a debilitating brain disease. It helped that new actors were added to this pot boiler, including Sanaa Lathan, Jonathan Groff and Tip "T.I." Harris, playing characters who replenish Kane's inner circle (which was devastated in the first season).

Extras: Episode commentary, featurette —RICK BENTLEY, FRESH0BEE

Hyde Park on Hudson

The same "humanizing a world leader" idea that led to the Oscar-winning "King's Speech" takes a turn for the ridiculous with this middlebrow drama that uses one of the most famous state visits in American history as a backdrop for a mildly scandalous romance. Bill Murray plays President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Laura Linney plays his distant cousin Daisy Suckley, with whom the president has been rumored to have had an affair. The movie is set during the summit between FDR and King George VI in 1939, which set in motion the United States' eventual involvement in the European theater of World War II. But any insights director Roger Michell and screenwriter Richard Nelson have into U.S./British relations in the 1930s get swamped by furtive glances and soap opera.

Extras: Deleted scenes, featurettes and a Michell commentary

Planet Ocean

Hey, you tired yet of feeling completely powerless to save the oceans while yet another piece of media tells you how urgent it is that we correct our behavior and do so? Because "Planet Ocean"—which dives into a declaration about the grave threat human industry and overpopulation pose to under-sea species—is not. Following that opening salvo, "Ocean" pulls back and assumes position as the nature special one probably expects it to be, particularly focusing on the incredible social structure that allows so many diverse species to survive and thrive. Between the stories and images, there is no shortage of means with which to inspire awe—and that remains the case once human beings crash the party a second time. Following a brief respite in which nature gets to be nature, "Ocean" weaves its opening statement and everything that follows into a single thread, with breathtaking images of the deep sea alongside comparably staggering images of gargantuan fishing operations and energy conglomerates that overwhelm the ocean's inhabitants by the thousands and without discrimination. So what to do? "Ocean" doesn't exactly know, either, and its final-scene suggestions read like an admission that a film's power stretches only so far.

Extras: Three making-of features

MTV cancels ‘Buckwild’ in wake of Gandeey’s death

Los Angeles Times

A week after the death of “Buckwild” reality-TV star Shain Gandeey, MTV has decided to cancel the series.

Production on the show’s second season was suspended after news broke last week that the 21-year-old had been found dead in his truck, along with his uncle and a friend, after going “mudding” (off-road-ing), near Sissonville, W.Va.

Van Toffler, president of the MTV Viacom Music and Logo Group, said in an exclusive interview with The Wrap on Wednesday that he did not hesitate to cancel the series.

“Shain was such a sweet kid. He was the heart and soul of the show, in many ways,” Toffler said. “So we have to deal with that emotionally. So we do our own personal soul-searching and then we also, as we always do, look at what’s going on in social media, we talk to our audience, and they felt the way we did in that—how can the show go on with this specter of a tragedy hanging over it? This guy was the rabble-rouser and he was the one who instigated a lot of the fun ... and we just felt like the show couldn’t go on without him.”

Toffler said the network already had filmed three episodes of a new season, but will not air them. On Sunday, MTV will run a special, “Buckwild: WV to the NYC,” that was shot before production had begun on the sophomore season. “There is a special tribute at the front of it and Sway, our on-air personality, will talk about Shain and his influence,” Toffler said.

The special will follow a marathon showing of the first season’s episodes.

“Thanks to everyone for their thoughts and prayers during this incredibly difficult time for our family. We have truly felt all the love and know that Shain is resting peacefully,” Loretta Gandeey, Shain’s mother, said in a statement. “As we look to honor him in our lives every day moving forward, we are happy to share some of his last moments doing what he loved best: having fun and making people laugh.”

“Buckwild” had been tapped to fill the big ratings shoes of “Jersey Shore.” With only one season under its belt, it’s hard to say if it could have reached “Jersey Shore” ratings. But its premiere drew an impressive 2.5 million viewers—a 56 percent increase over “Jersey Shore’s” 2009 launch, which brought in 1.4 million.

HARD SCIENCE

Advance your career or prepare for advanced scientific study at Northwestern University

Careers in science can offer engaging, important work as well as security in today’s unstable job market. In fact, employment opportunities for biological, medical, environmental and other health-related scientists are expected to grow faster than average for all occupations through 2018.*

You can prepare for advanced study in the sciences or boost your professional knowledge base with part-time evening courses in biological sciences, chemistry and physics from Northwestern University School of Continuing Studies. Choose from an undergraduate major in biological sciences or a premedicine or another science-related post-baccalaureate certificate, or simply take the individual courses that meet your needs.

You’ll learn from experienced instructors in state-of-the-art classrooms and labs. Northwestern University was recently awarded a $2 million grant by the Howard Hughes Medical Institute to strengthen undergraduate science education as part of a program that included 50 of the nation’s top research universities.

Chicagoan hopes infomercial resume lands him a job

By Mick Swasko

REDEYE

Jonathan Fin is serious. If an employer hires him as a result of his infomercial resume, they really will get a set of stainless steel steak knives.

It's a promise he makes in a series of videos he spent two months producing and launched April 4 in hopes of standing out among other job-seekers after six months of unemployment. He's dubbed himself the "All-In-One-ADMAN," and the 37-year-old West Town resident already has received a few responses from headhunters.

"I've been in advertising for over 10 years, and I got laid off about six months ago," he said. "I said, 'What can I do that no one has ever done before?' It's a little bit edgy, but in my mind I think you need to be edgy to stand out, unlike the word documents or PDFs people usually use. I am the product."

The videos and the dedicated website, allinoneadman.com, took Fin about two months to finish with the help of a few friends, including local standup comic Jeff Steinbrunner. In the videos, Steinbrunner plays a "ShamWow"-style salesman who rattles off Fin's qualifications to be bought for the low price of $19.99 (plus $99,999 shipping and handling, which Fin said is a tongue-in-cheek hint at his desired salary).

Despite the jokes — like the "Made in 'Merica" photo where he's smoking and holding PBR — Fin said he is serious about finding a job with his copywriting, design, advertising and production experience. He said he has the chops. He has worked for large firms like Euro RSCG and Draft FCB in his thirteen years in the industry.

"I'm absolutely looking for a job," he said. "I am going to lose my apartment soon if I don't find one, quite honestly."

Fin said he hopes to see the videos go viral, and he might not be surprised if they do. Several of his comedy videos and songs on his YouTube page have more than 500,000 views.

GO AHEAD, TREAT YOURSELF!

Down South BBQ Twist sandwich

Original Soul Vegetarian, 205 E. 75th St., 773-224-0704, originalsoulvegetarian.com
Southern food is synonymous with buttery home cooking and barbecued meats; but for vegetarians and vegans, finding substitutes can be a challenge. Luckily, Original Soul Vegetarian in Greater Grand Crossing is a meat-free haven that doesn't skimp on traditional southern flavor and down-home charm. The Chatham restaurant also distributes pre-packaged goods to Whole Foods and other local markets; however, ordering the acclaimed BBQ Twist sandwich on-site is an experience unlike any other. The $6 burger-like creation is an impressive feast for the eyes and taste buds, piled high with juicy seitan riblets, tangy barbecue sauce and veggie trimmings on a sturdy vegan bun.

Zanzibar chocolate shake

The Original Scoops, 608 W. 31st St., 312-842-3300, scoopsf.com
To sate an ice cream and dark chocolate craving in one fell swoop, head to Bridgeport for one of the best unsung milkshakes in town. At the original Scoops, a family-owned business that also serves cappuccinos and house-made cannoli, mouthwatering ice cream creations beckon. Each of the 32 custom flavors can be scooped into a cup or waffle cone, presented as a sundae, or mixed into a blizzard, malt or milkshake. However, the Zanzibar chocolate shake is the best way to combine homespun comfort with rich and creamy delight. The hand-packed chocolate ice cream seems like a more traditional option, but three kinds of African cocoa make this flavor an intensely satisfying surprise. Churned in a blender with a splash of milk, then served in a tall cup under an ample topping of whipped cream, this glorious $5.50 shake is a South Side must-have. —CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Brit in black and white

Los Angeles Times

Brit Marling may not be a household name, but the budding actress and screenwriter is well on her way. The Georgetown-educated Marling has been around the indie movie scene for a couple of years with the films "Political Disaster" and "Another Earth," which she co-wrote.

But her career picks up speed this month with roles in the new films "The East" and "The Company You Keep," which hits theaters Friday.

Marling also can be seen with actor Eddie

Redmayne on the cover of the April issue of W magazine as two of fashion's next big things.

We couldn't agree more. Marling is a classic beauty who stuns on the red carpet in looks that are simple but smart.

Marling attended the recent New York premiere of "The Company You Keep" at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City in a minimal but high-impact black-and-white dress by Viktor & Rolf. She added black strappy "Harting" sandals by Rupert Sanderson.

For a similar look, try ...

Aqua half-moon maxi dress, $88 at bloomingdales.com

Madison Marcus Maxi dress, $349 bloomingdales.com

Aqua Sport maxi dress, $168 bloomingdales.com

Slip on some strappy sandals, add a pretty pink matte lip, and you're ready for any occasion.

WHY YOU NEED PHYSICAL GOLD OR SILVER IN YOUR IRA OR 401(k)

With the uncertainty in the U.S. stock market and global economies, you've probably been hearing a lot about the idea of adding physical gold and silver to your investment portfolio, especially to your existing IRA or a 401(k) from a previous employer.

But how do you go about transferring a portion of your IRA or rolling over an old 401(k) into actual physical gold and silver coins and bars? That's where American Bullion comes in.

"It's actually a very simple and rather quick process, and we've helped thousands of people roll over or transfer their retirement accounts into precious metals," explained Jon Nelson, a spokesperson with American Bullion.

"We have a safe and simple in-house system in place that's hassle-free and 100 percent tax-free."

Nelson also noted to not be discouraged or surprised if your financial advisor tries to steer you away from owning physical gold or has never recommended it.

"Typically, advisors don't earn on-going commissions when you invest in physical precious metals," said Nelson.

"Our clients often comment on how safe they feel now and how easy it was to become an owner of gold," said American Bullion's Nelson.

FREE "Gold Guide" available by calling 800-897-9664.

"After all, gold has been preserving wealth for centuries, and whether you look long-term or short-term, you'll see that it's exactly the kind of uncertainty that exists in today's economy that increases the demand for gold."

American Bullion is offering a free Gold Guide packed with information about adding physical gold and silver to your retirement accounts. To receive the guide, call 800-897-9664.

Who makes a better best bud—LiLo or Bynes?

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Lindsay Lohan has been the reigning queen of Crazy Town for quite some time now, but Amanda Bynes is giving her a serious run for her money these days. Since we know they're both completely off their crackers, it's not really fair to do a traditional faceoff. But who among us doesn't have a crazy friend—the kind of person who's the focus of some great stories, but also makes you want to back away very slowly? We determined which nutbag would win our love in some very important real-life scenarios. DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

Blowing off your responsibilities—and your credit cards—at the mall

LINDSAY: Heck, if you go shopping with her, you might not even NEED money. David Letterman got the better end of this joke in a dig Tuesday night, telling Lindz, "I wish you'd come out with the tags on your dress," during her appearance on his show.

Getting revenge on your exes for posting terrible pics online

AMANDA: She has this great plan for suing "every blog, every magazine, every news source that's saying I'm doing anything wrong," according to a tweet Wednesday, so we're assuming that applies to all posters of unsavory pics as well.

Getting you out of a terrible date

LINDSAY: No, really, I'm not making this up. My friend REALLY DID get arrested/pulled over for drunken driving/break her probation/get another horrible mug shot taken. This has been great. I'll call you!

Encouraging a regrettable piercing/tattoo

AMANDA: What. Is that thing. In her face? No matter what horrible skin-related decision you make, your parents still can't be mad at you once they see Amanda's formerly pristine dimple.

Hitting on hot dudes

LINDSAY: This was almost a close one. But then we remembered a) Our enormous crush on Drake, and b) the fact that Amanda handled HER enormous crush on Drake by tweeting, "I want @drake to murder my vagina." We're trying not to scare him, so working with Lindz probably gives us a better shot.

Ordering delivery wings and watching 'The Biggest Loser'

JENNIFER LAWRENCE: For occasions like this, you should invite only people who would rather be drinking Andre on the couch and feeling awesome rather than popping Cristal in the club and feeling miserable.

That's the asking price for Hugh Hefner's Playboy Bunny house, where Hef's Playmates reside, yahoo.com reports. The 6,690-square-foot abode is across the street from the Playboy Mansion in L.A.

Offer you can't refuse

Proving once again that anything can be made into a reality TV series, Reelz Channel announced Wednesday that Al Capone's descendants will be the centerpiece of a new docuseries. "The Capones" will debut in the fall and stars Dom and Dawn Capone, owners of Capone's Restaurant and Pizzeria in Lombard.

Calling Alec Baldwin?

NBC's late-night shakeup isn't over. The New York Times reported Alec Baldwin was in early talks to take over for Carson Daly on "Last Call," citing unnamed sources, but then NBC on Wednesday renewed Daly's show for a 13th season. And none of this addresses who will replace Jimmy Fallon on "Late Night."

Here we go again

Looks like "Accidental Racist" isn't the only song Brad Paisley and LL Cool J have up their sleeves, rollingstone.com reports. The country-rap duo have released "Live for You," a song that will appear on Cool J's upcoming album, "Authentic," due out April 30. What's the old saying? Oh, right: Two wrongs don't make a right, guys.

They're engaged!

Talk about a nice view: Chicago-ish interior designer and TV personality Nate Berkus (from near right) proposed to boyfriend Jeremiah Brent on top of Machu Picchu in Peru on Monday, usmagazine.com reports. If you listen very carefully, you can almost hear the sound of wedding bells over the clamor of fans snatching up lamps and paperweights from his namesake home collection at Target.
